

Jetliner Cabins
By Jennifer Coultts Clay
Book Review by Amy Laboda

A 30-year career in air transportation management left author Jennifer Coultts Clay with some distinct opinions about what works and does not work inside an airliner. In Jetliner Cabins Clay treats us to a historical perspective of aircraft interior design, accompanied by more than 350 color visuals of airline interiors. The book was recently updated to include the next generation of aircraft, some of which have not yet even entered into production. You won't find a more comprehensive look at aircraft interiors anywhere else.

The World Beneath Their Wings
by Julie Jervis
Book Review by ANN Correspondent
Aleta Vinas

Today I was in an AT-6 Texan Air Racing in Reno. Later, I fought fires in a Bell 212 helicopter. Last week I flew in the Space Shuttle Discovery. Next week I may fly with the US Aerobatic Team or pilot a blimp. I may even do it tomorrow.

These are only a small sample of the adventures The World Beneath Their Wings will take you on. First-time author Julie Jervis tells the always thrilling and sometimes nail-biting tales of 15 female leaders in the aviation world. These women are a new millennium of female aviators.

Each of the women are trailblazers, not necessarily first in their fields, but certainly smoothing the path for their successors. Some are Dr. Peggy Chabrian, flight and ground instructor, university professor and founder of Women in Aviation, International; Denise Sanchez, Air Traffic Control Manager at San Jose International Airport and Kris Greblo, Hollywood stunt person and stunt pilot. Says Jervis, "these stories need to be told. They're incredibly inspirational for the next generation of female aviators that are coming along."

Jervis had been working at NASA Ames Research Center on the Super Computing Magazine. A colleague, Nick Veronico, suggested Jervis might enjoy writing on the side for In Flight USA Magazine. The magazine liked the idea of adding a women in aviation element. The book began in June 2004 as a series of articles for In Flight USA. After two or three articles and a positive reader response, Jervis and In Flight USA realized these would be great to put together as a book. The book would also permit the full story to be told.

SPORTY'S CLIP AND FLIP SUNGLASSES

I never thought that clip-ons were my style, but headsets and my sunglasses don't mix well, so I thought I'd try this pair from Sporty's when I saw the company's founder, Hal Shevers, wearing them at an air show. These sunglasses attach to the bill of a hat and never touch the face. Just flip the sunglasses down for sun or flip them up to stow them instantly against the bill of the hat. Their polycarbonate gray lenses are scratch- and shatter-resistant and the frame and clips carry a lifetime guarantee.

Clip and Flip Sunglasses are available for $19.95 by calling Sporty's at 1.800.SPORTYS or (513) 735.9000 or at www.sportys.com.—A.L.
